

notable as being something different from the ordinary beauty rules of keeping young:

1. "She must cultivate a sense of humor.

2. "She must have a hobby.

3. "She must have interests outside herself."

He thinks city women more likely than the women of lonely farms, to live up to these rules. He doesn't know, perhaps, that a new kind of farm life is growing up which makes it easy for the women of the country to cultivate humor, have charming hobbies, and participate in wide interests outside of their households. Nevertheless, Dr. Shear's suggestions are sound.

Women should be ripe at 40, as attractive as any other peach when sun, rain and sunshine have brought it to the stage of perfection.

The Story Club

by Edmund Vance Cooke

THE LOST HOUR

Part II.

You can see that it is a serious thing to lose an hour out of your life. After losing the first hour,

By New Year's day, he had lost an even week and he tried to celebrate Christmas. On the Fourth of July he was around crying "April Fool" to people.

Sammy couldn't help losing others, because his life didn't fit into anything he did. He lost time fast because he was so slow! which seems like a contradiction, but isn't.

He became so slow that his father said he couldn't catch the measles, but that was a mistake, because the measles caught him. It was a blessed thing for Sammy that they did. You know that